WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 15, 1894.

Bonds will be issued by Secretary Carlisle. When this announcement was first made a day or two ago it was thought to be merely a bluff intended to head off Mr. Blaine's bill for the immediate issuing of $55,000,000 of silver certificates, based upon the seigniorage of the silver bullion now lying idle in the Treasury, a favorable report upon which has been ordered by the House Coinage Committee; but it is now known that Secretary Carlisle has fully made up his mind, after consulting with Senator Sherman and other Republican leaders, to issue bonds under the act of 1875 unless Congress shall before Feb. 4 authorize an issue of bonds, and, judging from the opposition already shown, there is little probability of Congress doing it. The authority to issue bonds is generally believed to be good, although it has been seriously questioned by a few, but that it will arouse fierce opposition in the ranks of the Democrats and renew the hard feeling engendered by the silver contest is certain. The lowest interest bond provided for by the act of 1875 is a thirty-year 4 per center.

If President Cleveland offended Senatorial dignity by sending the latest Hawaiian correspondence to the House Saturday while the Senate was not in session, Senatorial dignity did not say a word to indicate it while the documents were being read in the Senate to-day. No excitement followed the making public of these papers, as their substance had been known for more than a week, but the details they contained have strengthened the anti-restorationists, and although President Cleveland is said to still cherish the hope that Congress will order the restoration of the Queen, I have been unable to find either a Senator or a Representative who believes that result to be even possible, not to say probable. Representative McCreary, Chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, says the matter will not be taken up unless there is some unexpected turn of affairs in Hawaii, and the Senate will wait for the report of the investigation now being made before taking it up, so that it is safe to say the Sowers will be blooming before Congress renders its verdict.

The general debate on the Wilson Tariff Bill is over and only one thing was fully demonstrated—the impossibility of anybody saying anything new on the subject. The debate under the five-minute rule, which will fill in the remainder of the time until the bill is voted upon, is expected to be more exciting, if not more interesting, than the set speeches. There is just enough doubt surrounding the fate of some of the amendments that are to be offered to the bill by Democrats to create a feeling of public expectancy. There are several of these amendments which are said to have sufficient Democratic backing to carry them through if they can get the solid Republican vote, but the present understanding is that the Republicans will not vote either way on any of the amendments. That understanding may, however, turn out to be erroneous.

The Commissioner of Pensions has no authority in law to suspend a pension. He says the decision of the court in the case of Judge Long, of Michigan, who brought suit for his restoration to the pension roll. Judge Long had already been restored to the roll under the act of Dec. 21, 1893 but the decision is nevertheless regarded as important.

It was undoubtedly the fine hand of the Administration that shed a new light upon Representative Bynum, of Indiana, by whose change of vote the majority of the House Ways and Means Committee decided that the income tax should be reported to the House in a separate bill and not be offered as an amendment to the tariff bill, and some of the anti-Administration men are charging that Indiana patronage, particularly the Postmastership at Indianapolis which recently went to a friend of Mr. Bynum, was the illuminant used. Be that as it may, the separation of the income tax from the tariff bill leaves the hands of the Administration free to fight the former, and it is doing it for all it is worth, while supporting the tariff bill.

If the applause given a speaker decides the power of a speech, Representatives Jerry Simpson, and Bryan of Nebraska, made the most powerful speeches of the week; they certainly got more applause than any other two speakers. Mr. Simpson introduced a soddy overcoat, after one year's wear, illustrate his remarks on the wool schedule. He said the Populists would support the Wilson bill, not because it was approved it, but because they thought it an improvement of about 20 cents on the present tariff, particularly where the interests of life farmers touched upon.

Salvini and the Romantic Drama.

For the week beginning January 22 Manager Morton has secured for Miner's Theatre the romantic actor Alexander Salvini. The engagement will prove of especial interest to all classes of amusement lovers. To the older theatre-goers it will recall the days of the Davensports, the Booths, and magnetic Fechter, whom Salvini, with his Latin temperament and characteristics, which particularly fit him for this style of work, resembles more closely, undoubtedly, than any of his predecessors of the American stage. Salvini, in awakening the glories of the departed days of romances, has hit upon a happy idea. It is an epoch which will always be popular, and which the American stage has had of recent years no distinguished interpreter.

Salvini will go to Newark direct from his annual engagement in Boston, which has been the most successful this year of any he has yet had in that city. His recent remarkably successful engagement at the Star Theatre, New York, is still fresh in the minds of many people in this vicinity who took occasion to see him then, as at that time it was not certain that he would play in Newark this year.

The repertoire for his engagement will consist of the most popular romances of Hugo, D'Annunzio, and Dumas, the arrangement of which will be announced later. It will be such a repertoire as would have delighted the admirers of Fechter, of whom Salvini is unquestionably the only actor who can be called his successor.

A strong feature in connection with the engagement will be the fact that all these plays will be presented with the same elaborate scenery and magnificent costumes as seen during the engagement at the Star Theatre, and with the same large auxiliary force. The supporting company will contain among others such well-known artists as Wm. Redmond, John A. Lane, Wm. Harris, Ben Johnson, Miss Eleanor Morrell, Maude Dixon, Augusta de Forrest and others. It will be Salvini's first appearance in Newark, and in the history of Mr. Miner's beautiful play-house there has never been announced such an interesting repertoire, comprising the standard plays of romance.

Palmer's Theatre.

The transfer of the wonderfully successful burlesque, Rice's "1492," to the Garden Theatre will soon be accomplished, and special interest will attach to its last performances at Palmer's, where it has made countless thousands laugh since last May. "1492" has a steady, reliable business week after week, which is the subject of managerial envy this hectic theatrical year. It is an elastic medium for the introduction of the latest novelties of song, dance and jest, and constant variation keeps it fresh and sparkling. Next Monday evening, Jan. 22, the 200th performance at Palmer's will be celebrated by the distribution of very charming and expensive souvenirs—bronzes statuettes nine inches high of that magnetic and popular singer, Theresa Vaughn, as Fraulein the ragged wail. When the second edition of "1492" is given at the Garden Theatre Monday evening, Feb. 5, it will reveal entire new embellishments in the way of costumes, scenery, songs and specialties, and some remarkably clever performers will be added to the already popular cast. In addition to "1492" Edward E. Rice has two other big successes. The Camille D'Arville opera company in his production of "Prince Kam; or, a Trip to Venus" opens at the Casino on Jan. 29th, and Henry E. Dixey in the rejuvenated "Adonis" has made a great hit at the Park Theatre, Boston.
